this pleasure.

I hope the morrow may be patterned after to-day, which is surely one of the most beautiful.

Mrs. Fay and Margaret join me in affectionate greetings.

Of course if you should not by eleven o'clock feel like receiving a call a postponement by telephone would be possible. About women!

Yours faithfully,
Charles E. Fay

July 22, 1914.

Dear Miss Whitney:

I look forward with pleasure to a call upon you to-morrow, Thursday, coming down on the train that is due in Plymouth at 2.56 p.m. It will be necessary for me to come without Mrs. Fay, who has not for many months made a journey so far as to Plymouth's "Even and rock-bound coast." She is sorry for many reasons to forego
